into modern Western medicine.

The American Academy of Medical Acupuncture. Leading the Way in the Successful Integration of Traditional Acupuncture into Modern Western Medicine.

The AAMA is committed to the development and integration of ancient acupuncture disciplines into the mainstream of modern Western medicine. Membership in the AAMA will help provide you with the expertise and knowledge necessary to meet your patients' needs in a practical and effective clinical, research, or private practice setting.

ABOUT THE ACADEMY

The American Academy of Medical Acupuncture ® was founded in 1987 and is the only national professional society of North American physicians who have incorporated acupuncture into their medical practices.

The purpose of the Academy is to integrate the concepts of traditional and modern acupuncture forms with Western medical training, thereby producing a more comprehensive approach to today's healthcare needs.

It is the premier organization in encouraging new research and dialogue through conferences, symposia, and special events.

The Academy is committed to holding its diverse membership to the highest standards of training and proficiency among North American physicians practicing acupuncture.

Your interest in joining the Academy and commitment of support and development to this important organization is greatly appreciated.

The Academy welcomes you to its ranks of dedicated practitioners.

ACADEMY BACKGROUND

Acupuncture has existed since at least the Han Dynasty in China over 2,000 years ago and was introduced to Europe in the 17th century. Only recently has detailed research into the effects of acupuncture been undertaken. Acupuncture is taught in European medical schools and applied in nearly all fields of medicine while in the United States, acupuncture is rapidly taking a legitimate place as a valuable therapeutic technique.

The American Academy of Medical Acupuncture ® was founded by physicians who had graduated from the Medical Acupuncture for Physicians Training Program at the UCLA School of Medicine.

The AAMA is the sole professional acupuncture society in North America accepting physicians and others trained in Western medicine who have added acupuncture to their practice. Members come from a diversity of training backgrounds. Physician members represent all the acupuncture disciplines currently practiced in North America.

In addition, the AAMA has created an independent American Board of Medical Acupuncture to recognize those physicians who have met appropriate training, education and experience requirements. More than 600 physicians have earned Board Certification.
